

MURDER-SUICIDE AT JONESTOWN! Political Scandal at the United Nations!

...SECRET BANK ACCOUNTS IN BOSTON

Someone is trying to kill Simon Cromwell.
Something he knows threatens unknown others.
Something that involves a mass suicide in a faraway place.

College professor, businessman Cromwell runs to save his life, to keep ahead of unknown assailants, to banish the fog that obscures a lost childhood.

The action moves swiftly—from the quiet of an island off the coast of New England to the gritty back streets of Boston; from desperate struggle in the shadows of Mount Tamalpais to a kidnapping among the steel bands and dancing at a tropical bacchanal in steamy Guyana.

Threatened, double crossed and overwhelmed, Cromwell discovers allies in unexpected places, finds solace in the arms of a beautiful woman with a murky past, discovers friends who cherish him for heroic deeds he cannot remember.

It begins during a tranquil vacation on an island. Cromwell's wife vanishes from a remote beach. A watery death threatens him on a ferry. Nightmares of flight down tree-shrouded rivers bewilder him. And always...the eerie cries of an unknown bird endlessly recur.

Drawn into a web of murder, flight and suffocating suspense, the reader is swept in the current of Cromwell's mistakes on a fast-flowing river of self-discovery and betrayal.
